Andrew Crook, NFFF President

The NFFF was first established in 1913 and throughout its long history has worked towards protecting and promoting the interests of the UK's fish friers. It is the only national organisation that can speak and act on behalf of fish friers, and the views of the Federation are sought throughout the catering and associated industries, as well as by local and central Government agencies and authorities.

Our Associate members play an essential role in providing products and services to the fish frying industry and in supporting the work of the NFFF in working towards the goal of maintaining fish and chips as the UK's Number 1 takeaway meal.
